

The Amateur Observers' Society of NY presents

Inevitable Discovery:
The Scientific Search for Life Beyond Earth

December 2, 2018, 3pm
Berliner Hall, rm 117

"Are we alone?"

Never before in the course of human history have scientists been so close to answering this most fundamental question of our existence. For decades scientists have concentrated their search for evidence of life on other planets and moons, but now that search has expanded to include the ever-growing number of exoplanets astronomers are discovering. Associate Professor Matthew Pappas, Earth and Space Science Dept of Suffolk County Community College, presents the scientific pursuit of the presence of life beyond our planet and how such a discovery might be well within our grasp.

